KENDALL'S SPAVIN CURE.

Dr. B. J. Kendall Co.
Gentlemen: I would like a couple of bottles of your Kendall's Spavin Cure. I have used it for a number of years and I consider it the best liniment I ever used. I have used it on a horse I have owned for three years and it has cured him of three different lameness. Yours truly, W. E. A. CULL.

Gentlemen: In purchase of Kendall's Spavin Cure I will say that a year ago I had a valuable horse that was lame and I could not cure him. I then got a bottle of your Spavin Cure and it cured him entirely. I have used it in my family for many years for colds, sore throat, etc., and believe it to be the best liniment in the world. I would not take three times what it is worth if I could not get another bottle, and I have had a second bottle and I will say it is the best thing I have ever used. I have recommended it to many of my friends and they all say it is the best liniment they ever used. Respectfully yours, EUGENE DEWITT.
Price $1 per bottle, or six bottles for $5. All druggists have it or can get it for you, or it will be sent by express on receipt of price by the proprietors.

"I heard Gerster sing last night, and Litta the night before but I would rather be in that dim old parlor in Roosevelt Place and hear La Mandore I my spirit is there now—do you not often hear it resting around in its favorite places? I stopped at Calhoun and Rosier as I came home, and while there I inquired for the Chenier mill, and found it was only thirty miles distant. The temptation to visit it was very great, but I resisted. I always do resist at the wrong time.

Frankly I want to say that I am unfit for business since returning and I think of hastening but how I shall get back to Savannah without offending my own sense of the fitness of things I have been worse since seeing in a Savannah paper yesterday a notice in the personal columns of your return to Roosevelt Place. True the paper was two weeks old when I got it, but it had its effect all the same.

You will not be offended if I say that I fin I life a burden where you are not to be seen and heard. I want to talk with you and hear you sing. I have thought, since I came here of a hundred things I forgot to tell you about Provence and Chateau Chenier and I have wondered how I passed so much time with you and said so little. What did we ever talk about? I remember nothing, save our last conversation and even that had no end—it was left in a mist. I told you I loved you, but I did not and could not tell you how deep and strong that love was. How it had become the very life of my life. My lips refused then, as my pen does now to express how dear you are to me. Forgive me if this letter seems foolish to you. I cannot see my way to any better mode of action than this simple statement of the truth I trust you to respect my sincerity even if you must cast aside my love as something not worth your keeping.

Rosalie read this letter in her own room, read it and reread it, with a quickened pulse and a sweet sense of its half hopeful half despairing spirit. It brought Edgar Julian before her just as she had seen him last his strong, handsome truthful face full of passionate tenderness for her. She could not think clearly her heart throbbed alm st painfully Adelaide came in presently and Rosalie gave her the letter to read.

Do you love him, Rosalie" the sister asked after she had finished

I—I—don t know," was the stammered reply

I think you ought to know," said Adelaide love is no light thing Is he handsome"

No not very—not handsome as they describe handsome men but he is tall and stately and noble looking and he is noble gen te hearted, true

I do love you love him " said Adelaide, gazing searchingly into Rosalie s eyes and I am sorry for it."

Rosalie did not answer Her beautiful bright head drooped and her eyes filled with tears.

I do not see how you can love a northerner " Adelaide continued presently one who was in the ranks of a army Whenever I think of those ruffians who burned our home and reduced us to poverty the grief in my arm seems to open afresh and I hate every soul in the north! Then poor papa with his wounds and his dark memories—"

Oh " moaned Rosalie, I know, I know." Oh, I wish I had never never left the old home Adelaide I am so very very wretched!"

Adelaide held Rosalies head between her hands and drew it gently down upon her bosom She knew what love was A sister s grave he l ies to whom her life had been pledged

Don t cry " the gentle said "if you love him it s all right d ar It was wrong f r me to say those things. It s all right you must mind my ill natured words You ought n t to suffer on my account. No doubt Mr Julian is a good and true man

Yes, he is," said Rosalie quickly, lifting her head and wiping away her tears he is just as honorable and good as he can be."

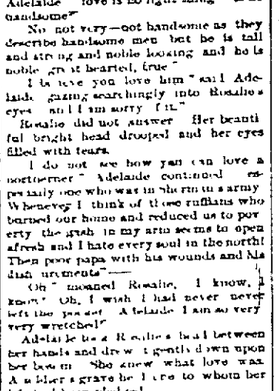
Adelaide still kept her hands clasping Rosalie s face between them with a gentle loving pressure

But you do love him, sister" she murmured softly

Rosalie suddenly blushed. I do not know if I love him " she naively said but I should dearly love to see him again. I think a great deal of him "

Adelaide felt the influence of her sister s freshness as she fathered trembling and bewildered in the midst of this great new experience.

CHAPTER XXI.
ADELAIDE RECOLLECTS.



That daring, deedless soldier lad who stabbed her with a bayonet.

Rosalie found it difficult to know what she ought to write to Edgar Julian, if she ought to write at all. He had been so kind to her, and she respected his honorable frankness so much, that, even if she could not say she loved him, she felt generously anxious not to wound him. But she really longed to see him. He had filled a large space in her life, and had revealed to her a most interesting contrast as his ultra northern traits of character struck sharply against southern obstacles; not that she had traced and defined this contrast or drawn any conclusion from it, but she had felt his superior knowledge of affairs, his sturdy truthfulness, his faith in the future of America, his belief in the value and nobleness of labor, his genuine respect for the common people, and, on the other hand, his rich imagination and his tender eloquence. She could not realize the bitter memories nursed by her father and sister touching the dark struggle for the Lost Cause She had no past to mourn over The future and the present were hers. She naturally enough had fallen in love with northern ways.

It seemed to her that the world was made for earnest, persistent people to take and enjoy, she believed in freedom as the war had fixed it—in free education free thought, free men and women She was not aware that Edgar Julian had influenced her to believe in these things the doctrine seemed quite as much her own as the old Provencal cross Julian had been simply a restorer of things lost—a reviver of things in abeyance. Rosalie keenly realized that her answer to Julian s letter must decide. She puzzled her mind to discover some happy way out of the dilemma. She ashed herself over and over again. She asked herself just as often she shrank away from the responsibility of saying yes or no. Her heart trembled she hesitated, faltered, dreamed. So the days went by while Edgar Julian shivered through the Chicago snowstorms waiting for a letter He, too, was wrestling with a problem He did not shrink from acknowledging his love—he gloried in it—but he did not feel safe in rushing back to Savannah, nor did he feel content to stay away. A man in love must be allowed some latitude of foolishness, and we ought to consider that each instance of love trouble has its sentimental peculiarities. Julian had uttered the simple truth when he wrote that he was unfit for business since returning " No man could have been more preoccupied all the time, more restless, more inclined to wave affairs aside and to give himself over to his fancies.

The letter he was waiting for was a long while coming, and when it did come it only gave emphasis to his difficulty

"Your letter," Rosalie wrote, 'has been here for a good while. You will forgive me for not answering it sooner when I say frankly to you that I have been dreadfully at a loss as to my duty in the matter I very much desire to be kind and good to you, but my selfishness has interposed itself all the time On one hand I must not, I cannot, tell you to come back, on the other hand I should be delighted to see you and talk with you. I did not know until I returned that you had gone away, and I missed you so much that I became restless. You had better not come back, I think, for it would be unpleasant to you, unless you could repress and forget everything beyond our charming friendship. I prize you above all my friends, and frankly, I hardly know why unless it is because you have humored my selfishness and fed my Provencal fancies as no one else save papa ever has I shall be very unhappy if I lose you and yet it would not be right for me to make you hope for what might never come.

'I respect you too sincerely not to be precisely frank if I know how, but I have vainly tried to make up some phrase or other expressive of my feelings. The best I can do is to say that I hope you will not come back till you have determined to be my good strong, generous friend and nothing beyond I could not bear to have you come in any other way, and yet I hope you will come. Our little garden is full of flowers and the air is very sweet with their perfumes.

'Papa and my sister Adelaide are here with us. We are going to Europe in July —to Provence, of course Aunt Marguerite is going along as guardian and chaperon for Adelaide and me. Won't you write me and tell me those things about Chateau Chenier that you say you forgot to tell me while you were here? I am sorry to have to refuse you anything, but I cannot see how any good could ever come of permitting you to return, so long as you feel as you say you do. You wouldn t enjoy being here, and that would make me very unhappy My century plant is in bloom. Give my love to Mrs. Largely Your friend.

ROSALIE CHENIER."

Julian read this letter with a queer mist in his eyes. He could not find much comfort in its half girlish, half stilted sentences, and yet he would not have had a word changed for anything He imagined he could trace Rosalie's innocent frankness and freshness between the lines. He sat and gazed into a big blazing fire for hours after he had learned the letter by heart. Her elastic, graceful figure and warm bright face came up before him, he saw her gray brown eyes and straw gold hair, he heard her low sweet voice. Did she love him? He read the letter again, pulled his mustache, frowned, smiled, read again, gazed into the fire almost fiercely, looked at his watch, went and packed his traveling bag and took the next train for the south.

When he got to Savannah he went to the Pulaski House. He did not care to rush in unawares upon the household at Roosevelt Place, especially since the Cheniers had come there. He sent his card to the house. An hour or two later Mrs. Roosevelt called for him in a carriage. She was glad to see him. Rosalie had gone to Jacksonville with Mr Roosevelt, but would be back tomorrow He was introduced to Colonel Chenier and Adelaide, and despite his predetermination to the contrary, was again installed as one of the household. You cannot live in a hotel in the south if your southern friend has a house.

Colonel Chenier and Edgar Julian were on good terms at once. A mutual friendliness, a soldierly comradeship, a shaking of hands on common ground, took place between them.

Adelaide, while not avoiding him, was dignified and shy, seeming to view him askance, as if doubting whether she ought to trust him, or as if trying to overcome an impulse toward hating him. Julian, on the contrary, felt a warm interest in this dark, and faced girl at once, and he was not slow to show it. Against his kindly assault a reserve was a poor shield. Without seeming to be adroit or artful he reached her womanly nature at every unguarded point. He assumed the place of a big, amiable, interesting brother, who meant to draw his sister out of her gloom.

Mr Roosevelt and his niece were delayed a week in Jacksonville—a very long week of dreamy, drowsy weather, the flowers bursting out and the mocking birds singing in every orange grove and dusky fig orchard.

Julian prevailed on Adelaide to walk with him in Forsyth park, and to drive with him to the several charming suburban resorts. He found her wiser in the ways of the world than Rosalie—quicker to catch hidden meanings in things—a strong, self poised woman, in fact. If she was not strictly beautiful she was attractive, and gave him to see that she possessed a reserve of culture a little faltering on account of long disuse.

One morning they sat together on one of the pine benches near the fountain in Forsyth park, and by some chance Julian got upon the subject of his war experience, and after the fashion of ex-soldiers told over many of his adventures. He had a fascinating way of presenting these personal reminiscences in the form of sparkling sketches. Adelaide recalled a little now and then, but his coloring was so liberal to the south that she could not be affronted. She began to grow strangely used to him, if one may so express it, his face, his movements, his personal effect, seemed to antedate, in some way, her acquaintance with him.

As he went over again his boyish freaks in the army she saw him more as a boy soldier than as a man, and he had a curiously familiar look.

A few northern tourists were abroad in the park, sauntering up and down the shaded walks and dallying around the flower decked fountain Some mocking birds were singing ecstatically in the treetops overhead

Suddenly without any definite forewarning, by one of those inexplicable cerebral tricks, Adelaide recognized Julian as that daring, devilish soldier lad who stabbed her with a bayonet and burned her father's mansion.

The knowledge came upon her as the apparition of death or some numbing calamity The blood went out of her face and she grew weak, trembled, drew her breath heavily, and clutched the back of the bench for support.

Julian instantly became aware of this change He was startled.

"You are ill," he exclaimed; "what is it? I will call a carriage"

"No no," she said faintly, "in a moment it will be over It is a mere faintness. Do not be alarmed."

She struggled bravely and conquered more than he dreamed of Presently she smiled and added

It has passed already, it was quite sudden Let us return, if you please."

"But you are not strong enough to walk," he insisted.

"Oh, yes," she said, rising and standing firmly before him. I can walk as well as ever I am quite over it, I assure you."

They returned to Roosevelt Place, Julian lightly talking, and she answering in monosyllables.

CHAPTER XXII.
A FERVID LOVER.

'You must not!" she said.

Nearly all the remarkable traits of southern character, good and bad, had rounded to full ripeness in Francis Whitcombe Ellis He had the gift of oratory, the luxuriant, untrained imagination, the fierce love of fight, the ambition for wealth the medieval notion of honor, no regard whatever for truth in the abstract, a perfect faith in the purity of women an absolute punctuality in keeping his word simply on the score of conventional honor, and a reverence for everything pertaining to southern aristocracy, only equaled by his hatred of everything northern and his high disdain of manual labor and all forms of mere breadgetting effort. To balance these characteristics, he was generous, brave, courteous to those whom he liked, tenderhearted, full of warm sympathies and laudable impulses, charmingly companionable, and possessed of the gift called 'magnetism " by which he had made his way to his present wealth and power in an incredibly short space of time. He had been aided at every step by good luck, as such men seem always to be, as well as by the fine intuition of a born genius, if the mere power to control and combine may be called genius.

He loved Rosalie Chenier with a passion like untamed fire whenever he thought of her but once his thoughts turned from her, he did not love her at all. He was not fickle. He simply lacked the power to think of two things at once He focused his whole mind and soul upon whatever for the time occupied his attention.

Rosalie s direct accusation against him had stung his southern sense of honor almost to the point of driving him mad for the time He had straightway rushed back to Savannah, bent upon making plain his innocence. That she should think him guilty of a vulgar assassination was more than he could bear For awhile his mental torture was exquisite. He went to work with enormous energy trying to ferret out the real assassin. If only Colonel Talbot could speak, he might easily settle the whole matter with a word, but Colonel Talbot could not speak, he lay there dumb and unconscious, a puzzle to the learned physicians.

When Rosalie returned to Savannah from the "pocket" Ellis knew it, but he did not attempt to see her, he meant never to speak to her again until his innocence had been proven beyond a doubt. He admitted to himself that, in a way, he deserved this punishment, remembering distinctly as he did his foolish threatening words. But he had a large faith in the star of his destiny—that is, in his luck, and he spared no effort to get into the mystery of that unhappy night.

After a time Sir Edmond Kane came back to Savannah for a few days, and Ellis was flattered by the marked attention paid him by the English aristocrat and his fair daughter. His thoughts were turned from Rosalie and his investigation of the crime, and he gave Miss Ellen Kane his undivided attention. The English girl found him a charming companion—so attentive, so knightly, so full of ready expedients for rational amusement, and withal, so delightful as a story teller. Those days made a memorable spot in Miss Kane's life. She went back to England dimly conscious that she had almost loved an American. As for Ellis, he never thought of her again once she had passed out of his reach.

At length the day came when Colonel Talbot regained consciousness. It was while Rosalie was gone to Jacksonville that one morning the newspapers made the following announcement:

"A Mystery Cleared Up—Colonel Warren Talbot Recovers Consciousness and Explains the Manner of His Assassination—He Was Struck by Wamsley, the Forger, Who Thereby Got Possession of the Forged Instrument Which Colonel Talbot Had on His Person That Night. Wamsley Has Escaped."

Those were the headlines. Ellis read the account and then hastened to Talbot's bedside to get confirmation of its details. Armed with such assurances as made his innocence absolutely unquestionable, he went forth exulting. He could not wait for Rosalie to return, but departed at once for Jacksonville.

It was dark when he arrived at the hotel in which Mr Roosevelt and his niece had rooms, but the first person he saw was Rosalie's colored maid standing on a veranda. He went to her at once.

'Fanny," he said, "where is your young mistress, Miss Chenier"

"She's in her room, sah."

'Can I see her?"

"I go see, sah."

'Here, Fanny, take this."

He wrote on a card.

'Give Miss Chenier that and tell her I am waiting for an answer: and, Fanny, fetch her answer here at once—do you understand'

"Yes, sah," said the girl, taking the card and hurrying away

The veranda was on the second floor, and overlooked a garden on one hand and the street on the other; the green boughs of a water oak brushed the gayly painted railings Ellis walked back and forth restlessly, every moment seeming to drag itself by with the delay of something maliciously perverse. He was in one of his intense, fervid moods. His face was lighted as with a pale flame, and his eyes, so dark and fine, were glowing with the heat of passion.

When he thought he heard the servant girl returning he looked around and saw Rosalie instead. She came rapidly to him and held out her hand. He took it with feverish eagerness and in a half stifled voice said

'Rosalie, I have come to show you the proofs of my innocence. You said I might"—

"Come into our parlor," she said, interrupting him: "you look tired. Have you just arrived?" She had already turned about and was leading the way to the parlor He followed her, gazing eagerly down at the sweet, warm cheek half turned to him as she swiftly swept through a long hall. She was dressed in black, which made her crinkled yellow hair look all the brighter by contrast. He thought she had grown taller within these last few weeks, she certainly was more beautiful than ever before.

The room into which they passed was a small, bright parlor opening upon a broad balcony She offered him an armchair, and flung wide the door to let in the perfumed evening air He did not sit down, but stood in the middle of the floor with his burning eyes fixed upon her face. She could not look at him, and her heart was in her throat. His first words had revealed to her all he was going to say. She had turned pale, and despite her effort to keep control of herself she was trembling a little.

'It was very, very wicked of me to say that dreadful thing about you," she said in a subdued but perfectly clear and steady voice. "I was laboring under"—

"No, no," he cried; "you need not begin in that way. It was all my fault. You had a right"——

'I had no right," she firmly said; "it was mean of me, but you will forgive me—you have come to do that?"

'I have come to tell you how I love you," he exclaimed impetuously, "and to ask you to be my wife. Oh, Rosalie, Rosalie, how I love you!"

She retreated before him as she would have done before a flame. She put out her beautiful hands and motioned him back. He stopped short, a strange change coming across his dark face. He was as handsome as man could be as he stood with arms on his breast and looked half despairingly, half triumphantly down at her. When he spoke he had all the magic of his voice under perfect control.

"Rosalie," he said, "you told me I might come back to you when I could prove my honor unstained. I bring it to you as spotless as"—— "I know, I know," she hurried to say; "I did you irreparable wrong. I shall never forgive myself—never."

"Don't talk that way," he exclaimed, "I can't bear it. You have done no wrong You are all right. Let the past keep its troubles and misunderstandings; I want to be happy now. Rosalie, are you afraid of me? Am I so dreadful to you that you shrink from me in this way?"

His grave, gentle voice was full of persuasive music. He stooped toward her, his eyes growing cloudy and soft. Suddenly he flung out his arms and clasped her close to him, kissing her hair and her forehead and murmuring unintelligible things. She wrung herself away from him, her physical elusiveness seeming quite as pronounced as that evasiveness which had always characterized her conversations with him.

"You must not!" she said, in a sort of breathless whisper "I cannot permit it." She actually pushed him with her hand.

In an instant a flash of resentment flickered across his face and he made an impatient gesture.

"Rosalie, I did not expect this from you," said he, slowly recovering his full height.'

"Oh!" she cried, her voice thin and dry, "I did not mean to offend you, I don't want you to be angry with me—you"——

"I love, love you!" he exclaimed, letting the words fall heavily from his ashy lips, as if he were beginning to anticipate a dreary failure.

She looked beseechingly at him, her hands hanging loosely intertwined before her

"I love, love you!" he repeated.

'I wish you did not," she replied, something of the old frankness and naivete ringing through her troubled voice. "I am so sorry to see you suffering."

He stood awhile in a hesitating attitude, then with a great effort he said:

"So it has come to this! Rosalie, Rosalie, must I go away wounded to the heart and die all alone somewhere? I cannot believe you mean it; you will not kill me, Rosalie, will you?" The frenzy of despair rang through his shaking, appealing voice.

"No, no, you wrong me!" she cried, "you will not understand me. You refuse to see that I would have you be my friend—that I honor you—that I despise myself for having suspected you wrongfully—that I never can make amends for the injury I did you."

"I don t want to hear that," he said imperiously "It displeases me. You cannot speak to me in that way any more than you can satisfy your own true heart Rosalie, you cannot spurn such love as mine. You will keep it—it came near unnerving that if he could, as Rosalie's husband he would stave off the proposition at once. What he did do was to frame an counter-suggestion. He preferred to consult Rosalie in the matter.

Many times Adelaide was on the point of disclosing her secret to her father and to her Aunt Marguerite, but an effort she recoiled from the task, uncertain as to what her duty was. The load grew heavier and heavier; the longer she delayed it the more urgent became the necessity for throwing it off.

When Rosalie returned from Jacksonville she at once informed Adelaide of what had happened between her and Ellis.

"I am very sorry for him," she said, "he seemed so hurt, so desperate."

"Well, I am glad it is all over and you have sent him away," said Adelaide, quite earnestly. "He is a bad man, and his attentions to you have troubled papa and me a great deal."

Rosalie sighed, and for a moment covered her eyes with her hand. His voice was echoing in her ears; no other voice ever was so full of tenderness, so hauntingly persuasive, so pathetic, so despairing.

His face and form were before her in all the fascination of their evil beauty. To give him up was like parting with some forbidden thing whose chief charm lay in its subtle power to hurt. From her childhood or early girlhood he had been her knight. She had learned to watch for his coming and going in the valley, the clacking of his horse's feet and the clang of his spurs and, pleasant fulfilling her romantic humor. This cloak of mystery had always hung about him.

"I shall never see him again," Rosalie said at last, lifting her face and looking at her sister with tearful eyes; "but I fear I never can feel sure that it was right for me to—to—for me to make him suffer so much."

"I think you have suffered more than he," responded Adelaide, "and he doesn't deserve your gracious solicitude. He will forget you entirely in a week."

"I wish he would—I should be happy if I could believe that," said Rosalie earnestly.

"Well, we must not pursue this hateful subject further," Adelaide said, rising and taking her sister's hand. "You haven't been trusting Mr. Julian politely. He is anxious to see you; he has, I believe, come all the way from Chicago for no other purpose, and has been lingering here for a week impatiently waiting for your return. It is not right to avoid him in this way."

Here was a sacrifice of feeling on Adelaide's part worthy of a martyr—a suffering for another profoundly Christian in its purity of motive.

"I know it is wrong," said Rosalie, "but I have suffered so greatly that I have been unfit to see any one; and—and—oh, Adelaide, I dread to see him!"

"This will never do," persisted Adelaide; "you shall not shirk the responsibility. I have exhausted all my stock of expedients for entertaining him. He roams around over the house as if looking for you. Come, you must go down. I promised him I would fetch you."

"Can't I have till morning? I am not fairly myself now. Tell him I am not quite well, that tomorrow I shall feel strong, I hope. You know what to say, —you will, won't you?" Rosalie's voice trembled and her eyes filled again.

Adelaide could not resist this appeal, so she went down alone and told Julian that Rosalie was indisposed and unable to see him, would be quite well by morning, she thought.

It was a bitter disappointment, but he had to bear it as best he could. No hours were ever heavier or slower. It seemed an age since he had seen her, and now this delay, with only a wall between them, had an ominous suggestiveness. When last they parted she had gone to her room leaving his passionate question unanswered. It seemed to him now that she had been in that room ever since.

Simply a Useless Expense.

The calling of the senate at this time is so evidently for political buncombe that it will fail of its intended effect. It is simply meant to attract public attention to the matter, and keep it awake until after the election. The senate cannot impeach any officer. The constitution vests that power solely in the house of representatives. The house must prosecute; the senate is the court that sits upon the case. There is no more propriety in having the senate conduct a preliminary investigation of its own accord than there would be in a juror investigating the facts of a cause before going into the box to pass judgment upon it.—Pittsburg Times.

Pattison's Presidential Ax.

Governor Pattison's presidential ax appears to have been in desperate need of grinding when he was compelled to resort to the expedient of getting the state to pay $40,000 or $50,000 for that purpose. Evidently the Democratic state platform, with its claptrap and falsehoods, had not taken hold of the people as was expected, and another movement has been made necessary in the interest of the Democratic state ticket. What a great thing the Pattison presidential ambition would have if New York should go Republican and Pennsylvania could be cheated into going Democratic!—Philadelphia Press.

A Political Dodge.

As there is already a committee of the legislature in existence investigating the conduct of these officials, and coming as it does just on the eve of the state election, this proclamation looks like a sharp political dodge to make capital for Pattison. It must not be forgotten that all the developments that brought out in the Bardsley matter and the state officials has been the work of a Republican district attorney, and now at this late hour, a moment before the state election, the lordly governor moves and calls an extra session of the senate.—York Dispatch.

The Governor's Sky Rocket Game.

Governor Pattison has called an extra session of the senate for political purposes only. In doing so he has not surprised anybody who has kept watch on the administration since it entered into possession of the highest office of the state last January. It has been a political administration from the outset, and every one of its actions has been a means to an end, and that end the political advancement of Governor Pattison. The governor is playing a sky rocket game.—Harrisburg Telegraph.

A Cheap Variety Show.

The extra session will fail in everything except great expense to the taxpayers. It is the prize they pay for, however, for putting into the executive chair a man who is playing the state for presidential stakes; for voting into power a party that has no principles which can win voters and must resort for political capital of a cheap variety in the hope of winning support from those who are too apt to be caught by such claptrap.—Boston Free Press.

REV PHILLIPS BROOKS was consecrated Bishop of Massachusetts on Wednesday morning of this week Bishop Potter of New York preached the consecration sermon

THE Era says that H H North Esq. Chairman of the Republican County Committee, is arranging for a Republican meeting to be held in the opera house, Bradford on Thursday of next week, Gen Hastings to be the speaker

THE Ims says William I Scott will assess the use of all or the bulk of his estate, valued at between $20,000,000 and 25,000,000 to his widow and children during their lives and after their death to their children and their children's children The estate yields an annual income of $1 000,000

CHAUNCEY DEPEW plans Flower's majority in New York at 100 000 Warren Ledger Chauncey Depew has never said that Flower would have any majority in New York He has frequently stated that he believes Sewell will be elected, and that is the opinion of all well informed citizens of that State.

THE Democrats have no hope of defeating Gen Gregg but they think they have a fighting chance to elect Pildon thereby defeating Capt Morrison It is time that a thorough organization of the Republican voters of this county was being perfected We cannot afford to give less than our usual majority this year

GOV PATTISON has approved the report of the committee appointed to select a site for a chronic insane hospital The trust selected consists of 145 acres on the Lebanon Valley branch of the Reading R R in sight from Reading and in known as the "South Mountain" site The price paid for it is $77 000 or something over $540 an acre Mountain land must be valuable here in Berks county Who says there was a job in this purchase?

WE see no reference in the Democratic papers to the letter written to the Buffalo Republican League by Andrew D White They do not attempt to answer this terrible arraignment of their party Never before in the history of our Commonwealth has there been presented such a spectacle a brutal faction controlled by a triple alliance, each member of which has been tried for a murder each one of whom has worn prison stripes, and fighting the opposition party not by argument, but by money It is a crisis in which patriotic men of both parties should stand together against this worst foe of both Republicanism and Democracy. Buffalo Commercial.

GOV PATTISON convened the Senate in extraordinary session on Tuesday of this week, and it was supposed that when he sent in his message giving his reasons for so doing the reasons would be made of an astonishing character which would justify his action But his message was a disappointing document in every particular He threshed over the same straw which has been going through the mealmus ever since the Bardsley defalcations were first brought to light, until it has become confused to many He produced nothing new leading to implicate Auditor General McCamant or State Treasurer Harper in the Bardsley steals and it looks very much as though this extra session would fasten odt much thinner, if it were possible, than his former effort has that line.

THE hardest worked man in any legislative body is the Journal Clerk the Reading Clerk has the next labor less position, and the Message Clerk comes next in the line for earning more than he gets. Yet in the act of 1885, which fixed the salaries of members and other officials of the Legislature, the absurd proviso is incorporated that these officials shall receive no pay for an extra or special session during the year in which a regular session is held The Chief and Assistant Clerks are also included among the officials who receive no pay for these special sessions, that they receive extra pay in other directions sufficient to make good the loss of pay for special sessions. The members did not fail to look after their own compensation for extra work as they got $500 and mileage whatever the length of the session but they were very niggardly in their treatment of the only officials in either body who perform more than ordinary ability to intelligently discharge their duties.

A MUD CAMPAIGN.

The Harrisburg Patriot of Saturday last made a personal attack upon the character of Capt. Morrison, the Republican candidate for State Treasurer. It was not a fair, open attack, in which facts were given of any wrong doing on the part of Capt. Morrison, but vile insinuations were thrown out that he had been guilty of crimes which would necessitate his being withdrawn as a candidate from the Republican State ticket A more infamous assault was never before made upon the character of an honorable citizen of the State, and there is no doubt that it will result beneficially to Capt. Morrison's candidacy when the votes are being cast on election day

That this is to be a mud campaign on the part of the Democratic bosses, from this time to election day there is every evidence In fact they are already showing their hand in that direction as will be seen by the following letter from a responsible gentleman dated Philadelphia, Oct 11

It is learned from a reliable source that the Democratic State Committee intends to inaugurate a mud slinging campaign Beginning this week it is proposed to circulate on near 1 of copies of the New York World and New York Evening Post which will be filled with slanderous attacks upon the Republican candidates This plan of campaign has just been decided upon at a conference in this city of Democratic bosses, at the inspiration of Harrity who has already enlisted the same newspaper influences here against that estimable gentleman George D McCreary the Republican candidate for City Treasurer. Knowing that not a single newspaper in this city would say one word against Mr McCreary, who is a well known business man and whose reputation as a philanthropist is known throughout the State, the Democratic leaders have gone to New York from which point they have started their assaults. The same tactics are to be resorted to in this State The Democratic papers throughout the Commonwealth are expected to reproduce the slanders originated by the New York journals The campaign of vilification and mud throwing is all ready for launching but it is believed that with the knowledge of the source from which these attacks emanate the people will know how to fully appreciate their value

THE SOLDIERS MONUMENT

Have the comrades of the several Posts of this county forgotten the obligation they took upon their shoulders last winter in reference to liquidating the debt against the Soldiers Monument At the February meeting of the McKean County Association as it is called, it was unanimously agreed by the representatives of the Posts present to pay the debt through the Posts of the county each Post to raise an amount equal to their membership It was also claimed that the enhanced membership of the several Posts of the county footed up about 600 and at $2 50 for each comrade would raise money enough to pay the entire debt It was distinctly understood by all that this burden should not be borne by the old soldiers but should be paid by the people at large who ought to pay it without a murmur Only three Posts in the county have raised their quota, and it is to be hoped that the others will be able to notify the chairman, Capt Chapman of Bradford town, that they have raised theirs We know that this debt is looked upon as a chestnut around the county but it is time that there should be no such chestnut in evidence In that connection we are assured to state that the contractor who holds the debt against the monument has recently written to Judge Morrison that if the debt is paid by the 1st of December next he will throw off all interest which would amount to hundreds of dollars.

CHARGES AGAINST PARNELL.

Americans cannot learn with indifference of the death of Charles Stewart Parnell The descendant of Old Ironsides has always had a friendly place in the heart of the nation that his grandfather served so well, and from that grandfather there is little doubt that Parnell inherited much of what was best in his nature A year ago Parnell would has gone to the tomb without even a stain upon a name and a fame that shone with luster undimmed and unsurpassed in the history of his age and generation As it is, the stain that has been will be blotted out by the tears of an Ireland united over his grave

Parnell has done a greater work for Ireland than O'Connell or Sarsfield either attempted or surpassed He taught Ireland that her hope for the future was in being the peer and the friend, not the subject and enemy, of Great Britian, that her freedom and nationality were to be won in the poll booth and in Parliament, and not in the worse than useless martyrdom of insurrection against the most powerful empire that the sun ever shone upon He pointed out that Ireland's deliverance was to come with the consent and against the will of the sister and not against the will of the sister and neighboring nation, and that her destinies could not be changed by reckless fruitless violence. He was a man marked by nature for leadership. His very distance and apparent cold ness of manner were excellent qualities in one who presided over a party composed of diverse elements, any one of which would have been immediately jealous of favor shown to the other Beneath the distant exterior was a strong and stubborn character, an unflinching will, a cool and deliberate mind He brooked no rival in his place of command, not because he wanted or desired to play the despot, but because he new that a dual leadership would mean the speedy ruin of the cause to which he devoted his existence. That he was personally ambitious there can be no doubt, but it was an ambition that had in it no spark of disloyalty to his country and her cause That he was impatient of coercion and criticism, and perhaps also of wholesome advice, may be asserted, but it was the impatience of conscious superiority, the irritation against lesser things which seems often to accompany the higher type of men whom nature endows for command.

Like Napoleon, Parnell was perhaps inclined to the view that the same moral laws are not for all mankind, and that at a certain pinnacle they can be safely ignored. In this he was mistaken, as some of the greatest in the world's history were mistaken before him. But his faults will disappear from the memories of men as the fog that lingers after the blush of day, while his great service to human liberty will shine like the sun in its zenith, not in this generation alone, but as long as humankind continue to remember and to honor the standard bearers in the warfare of freedom.

It is sad to reflect that Parnell did not survive to see accomplished the great task that he carried forward so nobly, that his eyes are closed forever with out having rested on an Irish Parliament in College Green But he died with victory almost in sight, with the almost certainty that Ireland would ere long take her place among the nations of the earth and of Parnell, as of Pindar, it may be said that then, and not until then should his epitaph be written. N Y Press

FROM THE STATE CAPITAL

From our own correspondent.

HARRISBURG Oct 12 1891 Sound the Bugle is the caption to an article that is going the rounds of the democratic press of the State Yes sound the bugle to signal for retreat boots and saddle was sounded weeks ago by the republicans, and the dummy's are demanding that the bugle sound the retreat to save further slaughter Gregg and Morrison the republican candidates are mounted and have the fight already in hand and the dummy's are on the run so that the sound of the bugle is a sure sign that the enemy is unable to stand the charge of the Union Veteran candidates and when the final assault shall be made on November next the democrats will meet either Oppenheimer

The straits into which the Democratic party is driven is glaringly the desperation of the faithful in every move that is made

In certain quarters of democratic power it was until very recently decided that Governor Pattison should take the stump in Pennsylvania and make political speeches for Wright and Tilden but by some premature scamp these plans have been disclosed and the Governor has now refused to do the bidding of the bosses, and this fact discloses the feeling of unrest that pervades the democratic hosts It was suggested that by the Governor taking the stump and abusing the republican methods and using democratic suspicions for actual facts, it would bolster up the dying democracy in this State The party of Jackson has for a number of weeks been suspicious that the republicans of the State had in reserve, for the last few days of the campaign something that would be damaging to the cause of democracy and the suspicion is the ground for urging the Governor to leave his executive Chair and make political speeches which shall be devoted mainly to a defense of himself and his party methods, in the sense that have already been made by the investigations and other political accusations that have been made and which are the only stock in trade that the democrats have thus far invested in

The democrats have grown awfully suspicious and are keeping up an awful cry of mad dog mad dog It is the old story of the timid boy who whistles passing a grave yard at night started to whistling vigorously to keep his courage up The democratic orators have become frightened at their own assertions and evil thoughts and they pursue the Governor Pattison to go out and wassle for them and make the fault believe that nothing will hurt them and that no danger is near Another reason assigned why he should take the stump is found in the fact that no public accusations of facts have been spoken that have had the damaging effect that was anticipated In these circumstances it is feared that Pattison's adherents will not consent to keep him from the stump for fear that he will say something that will injure the party cause Many of these suggestions are made by the friends of Governor Pattison, it is said, regrets now that he did not sign the bill when it was before him

Under the advice of Harrity every means to put as great a portion of the democratic campaign expense on the State as possible is resorted to and as each falls another is suggested to take its place, and as the day of election gets nearer the dummy's have a half dozen or more in store and which they are now preparing to unloosen on the public

The latest that has been thought of is for the Governor to request the general government to grant extradition papers for the return of Mr Livsey from Canada, where the ex-Cashier is now living, by the democrats, to have taken up his place of residence. Great curiosity is of course, manifested to learn just what the charges against Mr. Livsey may be that will be used as a plea for the extradition papers, but the Governor looks very wise when he is asked upon what grounds he will base his request. He claims that he has sufficient reason for the request and that he has reasonable assurances from the general government that his request will be honored. And again, Senator Quay, Mr Magee, of Pittsburgh, Mr. Martin and Senator Porter, of Philadelphia, and a whole raft of other prominent republican politicians are to be arrested on trumped up charges, and it is supposed as well as hoped that this new move will give the democracy a grand boom.

The cause of the Bourbons is fast waning and by the time election day comes around there won't be anything at all left of the party or any reason why it should any longer exist. The leaders are very nearly at the end of their string and with a few more vigorous kicks just before the election, it will lay down and give up the political ghost

The republican campaign was formally opened and the first gun fired at Holly Tree Inn, Chester county, on Friday evening last by General D B Hastings.

The democracy in their last State convention platform made the effort to lay down the gauge of battle for the campaign and declared that local issues alone were involved and that the democracy would discuss nothing else, but General Hastings tells them in his speech that the republicans will make the issues and unless the democracy will answer these that party will stand convicted by it silence which must be taken as a plea of guilty to the charges made Here is the text taken form General Hasting's speech the policy of protection to Home Industries and Home Labor, an honest dollar worth one hundred cents at home and abroad an honest ballot worth and both the advancement of the colored race and faith in the administration of the public service The democracy don't fancy this because John Bardsley is not referred to and to meet the issues the democratic programme is forced to be disclosed somewhat prematurely The Harrity mud slinging has been directed to commence and as a result a great number of the little obscure country party newspapers have begun to publish the most outrageous lies in the attempt to besmirch the private character of the republican candidates This is only a beginning more will follow and t will grow in filth and ugliness and untruthfulness as the campaign nears its closing hours The republicans however will not be caught by such campaigning and but few of them will be found who will be estranged from the party ticket and it will have no effect as against our standard bearers.

To morrow the Senate will convene in accordance with the Governor's call. It is not thought however that anything will be done because the republican majority of that body will do nothing to furnish campaign ammunition for Harrity's campaign this is all the Senate was convened for and the indications point to the probability of Governor Pattison having this knowledge conveyed to him early in the Senate's session The Governor it is said will embrace the opportunity to make a long political harangue on the sacred duties of the Senate in the present condition of State affairs and will no doubt wind up with gentlemen please address me &c

It ought not be at all surprising if the Senate after convening should pass a resolution of adjournment no sine die after the election, then reconvene and give to Mr Pattison all the investigation he can wish for Three persons for Delegates to Constitutional convention from the Twenty fifth Senatorial District.

One person for Coroner of McKean County.

One person for Jury Commissioner of McKean county

I also make known and give notice of the following

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF THE COMMONWEALTH, } HARRISBURG, September 25th 1891

TO THE SHERIFF OF McKEAN COUNTY

In compliance with the provisions of an Act of the General Assembly entitled "An Act to provide for a Convention to amend the Constitution, and the election of delegates thereto approved the nineteenth day of June, Anno Domini one thousand eight hundred and ninety one, the duly qualified electors of this Commonwealth shall at the general election to be held throughout the State on the first Tuesday of November next, vote for or against holding a convention to amend the Constitution, and for the election of said convention if a majority of the electors in the Commonwealth favors such convention In addition to the qualified electors in the several districts of the State as prescribed by law, persons in the military service of the State or of the United States who have been citizens of the Commonwealth for one year next preceding the election, and who have resided in the election district in which they offer to vote for thirty days immediately preceding the election, shall be entitled to vote at such election

SECTION 2 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same That at the general election to be held throughout the State on the first Tuesday of November next, the duly qualified electors of this Commonwealth shall vote for or against holding a convention to amend the Constitution according to the regulations provided in the subsequent sections of this act

SECTION 3 That said general election to be held as aforesaid a majority of the electors of the State in favor of a convention to amend the Constitution shall be composed of delegates duly elected and said assembly shall thereupon meet as provided

SECTION 4 At the general election to be held on the Tuesday next following the first Monday of November next, there shall be elected by the qualified electors of this Commonwealth delegates to a convention to revise and amend the Constitution of this State. The said convention shall consist of one hundred and twenty seven members to be elected in the manner following to wit twenty seven members shall be elected at the State at large Each voter of the State shall vote for not more than eighteen candidates, and the twenty seven highest in vote shall be declared elected One hundred and fifty delegates shall be apportioned to and elected from the several districts of the State, three delegates to be elected from each Senatorial district In choosing said delegates, each voter shall be entitled to vote for not more than two of the members to be elected from each Senatorial district, and the three candidates highest in vote in each district shall be declared elected

SECTION 5 The tickets to be voted for at said election shall be of the description as prescribed by the several election laws of the Commonwealth so far as the same are applicable thereto and not inconsistent with the provisions of this act

SECTION 6 The tickets to be voted for or against holding a convention shall have on the outside thereof the words "For a Convention" or "Against a Convention," and no other or different words there to

SECTION 7 The tickets to be voted for members at large shall have on the outside the words "Delegates at large" and on the inside the names of the candidates to be voted for not exceeding eighteen in number

SECTION 8 The tickets to be voted for district members shall have on the outside the words "District delegates," and on the inside the name or names of the candidates voted for not exceeding the proper number limited as aforesaid but any ticket that shall contain a greater number of names than the number for which the voter shall be entitled to vote shall be rejected

SECTION 9 The return judges shall meet at the same places and at the same time after said election, and shall make out the returns thereof in the manner and form as directed by the several laws regulating elections for the return of members of the General Assembly, and shall certify and file the same in the same manner and form as members of the General Assembly are elected, and the general laws regulating elections in the several counties of this Commonwealth, and the returns thereof, and the duties of the several officers in relation thereto, except as herein otherwise provided, shall be applicable to the election provided for by this act

SECTION 10 The said return judges shall also make out a certified statement of the number of votes given at said election for the adoption or rejection of the proposed amendment to the Constitution, and shall certify the same in the same manner as they certify the returns of members of the General Assembly, and shall file the same in the office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, and the said Secretary shall, with the returns of the election of delegates, lay the statement of the votes for the proposed amendment before the Governor, and the Governor shall, in his proclamation declaring the persons elected delegates, declare whether the proposed amendment has been adopted by the people

SECTION 11 The delegates elected as aforesaid shall meet at the Capitol of the State on the first Tuesday of January next after their election, and proceed to organize the convention by the election of a president and such officers and clerks as they may deem necessary, and shall be the judges of the election returns and qualifications of their own members, and a majority of the delegates shall constitute a quorum to do business, but a smaller number may adjourn from time to time and compel the attendance of absent members in such manner and under such penalties as may be prescribed by the convention

SECTION 12 The said convention shall have power to appoint such officers, employes and agents as they may deem necessary, and fix the compensation to be paid to them, and to provide for the printing of their proceedings, and all other necessary expenses, and the same shall be certified by the president and secretary of the convention, and audited and paid in the manner that other public accounts are audited and paid

SECTION 13 That nothing in this act contained shall be construed to require the submission to the electors for their approval or rejection of any alteration or amendment to the Constitution which may be proposed by the convention hereby provided for

SECTION 14 That the delegates elected as aforesaid shall be entitled to the same per diem and mileage as members of the General Assembly, and the same shall be certified by the president and secretary of the convention, and audited and paid as other public accounts are audited and paid

SECTION 15 That the sum of fifty thousand dollars, or so much thereof as may be necessary, be and the same is hereby appropriated to carry this act into effect, to be paid out of the State Treasury upon the warrant of the Auditor General, upon the certificate of the president and secretary of the convention, and the Auditor General and State Treasurer are hereby authorized and required to settle and adjust the same

And I also make known and give notice that the aforesaid general election will be held in the several districts of the Commonwealth at the several places of holding elections in the several counties of this commonwealth, approved March 30, 1858, it is enacted That the qualified voters of the several counties of this commonwealth at all general, township, borough and special elections are hereby declared entitled and required to vote by tickets, printed or written, or partly printed and partly written, severally classified as follows to wit One ticket shall embrace the names of all judges of court voted for and to be labeled outside "judiciary," one ticket shall embrace the names of all state officers and shall be labeled "state," one ticket shall embrace the names of all county officers voted for and be labeled "county," one ticket shall embrace the names of all township officers voted for and be labeled "township," one ticket shall embrace the names of all borough officers voted for and be labeled "borough," and each class shall be deposited in separate ballot boxes.

There are yet 30,000,000 feet of logs to be rafted out on the boom above Mt Jewett.

We understand that Howard Wilson will soon open a restaurant in the Mason building, on Main street.

A pure play, teaching healthy lessons sincere in motives, and clean in language such a one is "Old Farmer Hopkins"

Apples are selling at four cents a bushel, cider one dollar a barrel and potatoes are a drug on the market in Burke county

Look out for a dangerous counterfeit fifty cent piece of the date of 1887. It has a clear ring but is a little too clear than a genuine coin

Don't fail to attend the illustrated lecture on "Microscopy" by Dr J H Montgomery, at the Court house next Thursday evening

Thousands of bushels of apples will go to waste, it is said, in each of many counties of the state, as a consequence of the immense yield

Wit, humor, pathos, music, delightfully blended, makes Old Farmer Hopkins" the success it is. See it next Wednesday evening at the opera house

We received a very interesting letter from Journal Clerk Ransom of the State senate, just before going to press, which we regret cannot find room for insertion in this paper

The frost having opened the burrs, shelling parties have been in order the past week, and large quantities of black walnuts and chestnuts have been brought to town

Mrs Lewis E Bush on Wednesday received $3,000 from the A O U W that being the amount of her husband's certificate in the endowment department of that order

The new residence erected on Main street, by L. W Mason, is about completed and is a model of neatness and convenience It will be occupied by S. C. Townsend.

The deer season opened October 1st. Under existing laws the killing of fawns when in spotted coat, chasing of deer or elk with hounds and the killing of deer when in the water is prohibited.

The entertainment by the teachers at the Institute, last year which was given as an experiment, and which proved a rare literary and musical treat, will be repeated next Wednesday evening.

Two good congregations greeted the Rev E E Holmes, the new pastor of the M E church on Sunday last. Mr Holmes is cultured and scholarly, possesses a good voice and expresses himself clearly and forcibly He was attentively listened to and made a very favorable impression

By Act of 1867 it was made the duty of the Court to direct who should pay the costs on all petitions for road views including viewers, re-views and re re-views. It is hardly the correct thing for the Court to put the costs on the county, where petitioners ask for a road in a locality which has little use for one and where it would be impractical to build one In such cases why should not the petitioners pay the costs?

—The Andrews' Oil Company has sold its producing interests in the neighborhood of Mt. Jewett, consisting of 3000 acres of land and 90 wells, which are producing 200 bbls a day, for a little over $180,000. The purchasers are F. D Wood and L. W. Young, of Bradford.

KANE HOSPITAL.

Kane occupies a central position on the divide running across the Atlantic coast and the Mississippi valley the water draining into both the Susquehanna and Allegheny rivers It is the terminus of the middle and western divisions of the P. and E. Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad (narrow gauge) railroads. It is the centre of large lumbering and oil interests and manufacturing establishments as well as a large summer resort. These conditions necessitate a hospital for the accommodation of the injured in the vicinity of the railroads and lumber camps. The hospital is situated in the beautiful park surrounding the Thomas Mansion, a magnificent summer resort, where fine shade trees protect the inmates from summer heat and winter storms. Here three trained nurses and a corps of professional surgical assistants are employed. The best drug contains beside the doctor's office a ten prison cell, dining room, kitchen, bath and toilet rooms, 12 separate wards for individuals and cases, an operating room, 25 by 30 with skylight, and the surgical work and cleaning of the operating room, for cases receipt operations are capable of holding ten beds. A special nurse is employed from the nursing staff to assist the surgical work. The arrangements for subscription are the best suited of facilities for the treatment of the sick and the surgical instruments are all of the latest designs. All cases are taken for treatment, except those having contagious diseases, and the emergency reception cases, for which no obstacle is put in advance while the physicians are always ready to receive cases committed by the profession. Physicians having hospital patients in charge are permitted to attend their patients in the hospital and have the free use of the knowledge of those with whom he is in consultation a critical case, requiring day and evening attendance, by the nurse the council of two medical physicians, and the surgeon in charge of the hospital, are held at the hour of nine and ten o'clock A. A DISTANCE.

She was fair—and my passion began'
She smiled—and I could not but love!
But when from that I obtained esteem,
No beauty my passion could move!

In despair the sought doctors in vain,
Till the learned of "eminent type bosses"
Most her breath to assist in the dew
Which falls upon roses in June.

To-night, as we sit in our home.
And I kiss her sweet lips o'er and o'er,
We bless Dr Sage in our bliss,
For the joy that he brought to our door.

There is no disease more trying to friendship than catarrh! The constant efforts to clear the throat and nose, the offensive breath, all the features of the disease, make it as much dreaded by the one, quite to the victim. Humanity has reason to bless Dr. Sage for his "Catarrh Remedy." The manufacturers offer to forfeit $500 for cases they cannot cure.

Suppressing for the MIRROR.

Fall of the Leaf.

The bright, green foliage of summer which is now variegated with golden tints, and leafless trees will soon presage the coming of winter's chilly blasts. Nature has been more than usually lavish in her gifts and abundant crops make the heart of the husbandman glad. With the advent of fall it will be well for all to take proper safeguards against disease. A pure stimulant tones up the enfeebled system For this purpose use Klein's world famed "Silver Age" or "Duquesne" rye Both are warranted absolutely pure. They sell respectively at $1 50 and $1 25 per full quart. Major Klein also sells six-year-old Guckenheimer, Gibson, Cornbolt, Finch and Bear Creek at $1 00 per quart, or six quarts for $5.00. Goods shipped anywhere Send for catalogue and price-list, mentioning this paper, to Max Klein, 83 Federal Street, Allegheny City, Pa.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica and Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. F. R. Foster, Druggist.

THE COBDEN CLUB.

INFORMATION REGARDING THIS FAMOUS ORGANIZATION.

Its Object and Membership—What It Has Done Already in the United States—Its Anonymous Members.

A correspondent asks for information regarding the Cobden club, of England, and as we are now told that members of this famous organization are contributing money to influence the elections in Ohio and elsewhere this fall, it may not be amiss to let our readers know something about this powerful and influential club.

It was formed in 1866, the year after Mr. Cobden's death, with the object of encouraging the growth and diffusion of those economic and political principles with which Mr. Cobden's name is associated." The management of the club, together with the election of members, is intrusted to a committee, three of whom form a quorum. This is a close corporation with a vengeance. The members are not elected by the club, but by a committee sitting with closed doors and only three are needed to act, and this committee manages the whole affairs of the club. The members consist of the highest and most influential men in English politics and at least a hundred are members of the British parliament, and the aggregate wealth of its members would reach many hundreds of millions of pounds. No wonder then that its influence is boundless and sure to be felt wherever it is attended. But of course what our readers are interested mostly in is what it is doing in the United States. That it should do anything at all seems the height of impudence. But that it has done and is still doing work in this country are matters of fact and easy to prove. In its report of 1887, at its annual meeting of July 20, we find the following:

"The Cobden club attains its majority this year, and your committee ventures to say the members may congratulate themselves on a very good twenty-one years' work. Something has been done by this club in the twenty-two years since Mr. Cobden died to keep the name of the great Free-trader green and his influence fresh in the current of political life. His policy and his work have been kept well in evidence at home and abroad. There are champions of Free-trade in all parts of the British empire and in most of the countries of the world whose interest, zeal and enthusiasm is the cause are due in a large degree to the work and teaching of the Cobden club."

On another page we find the following:

"The work of the committee consists principally in the publication and circulation of books and pamphlets in accordance with the objects of the club. These writings have been distributed very extensively in this country and in all parts of the world."

On page 150 begins a list of these publications thus distributed, containing such works as "Report on the United States Revenue," by David A. Wells; "Darwin on England and America," "The Creed of Free-trade," by David A. Wells, "Free-trade and Protection in the United States," by Joseph Wood, "The Western Farmer of America," by Augustus Mongredien, "The Future Work of Free-trade in English Legislation," a first prize essay, by C. S. Troup; "A Primer of Tariff Reform," by David A. Wells, Norwich, Conn.; "The Economic Free-trade and Free-trader's Guide," first edition, edited by R. R. Bowker, New York Free-trade club; "The Industrial Situation and the Question of Wages, a Study in Social Physiology," by J. Shoenhof.

Among the leaflets distributed we find: "The Effect of Protection in America," by Sir William Romer Forcewood, 370,000 copies; "United States Protection versus British Free-trade," by Right Hon. W. E. Baxter, M. P., 200,000. A note at the end of the list informs us that the total number of copies of these circulars and pamphlets, exclusive of leaflets, distributed since July, 1883, reaches 1,611,790, and that the total number of leaflets thus distributed up to that date is 10,900,000, and that:

"In addition to these circulars the club has distributed several hundred thousand copies of newspapers, reprints and slips containing accounts of the meetings of the club, and of various subjects connected with the principles advanced by the club.

"From the beginning of the year 1887 alone over 600,000 copies of such newspapers and slips have been circulated."

It will be noticed that this report expressly says, "These writings have been distributed very extensively in this country (meaning England) and in all parts of the world." It is a matter of common notoriety that one of these works, to wit, "The Western Farmers of America," by Mongredien, was circulated among the farmers of our western country gratuitously in large quantities.

This very list shows that the Cobden club circulated in all 83,000 copies of this pamphlet. From whence is derived the funds for this work? In the report for 1886 occur these words: "And never before was so great a demand made upon the resources of the club for Free-trade literature, a demand which the committee was able to meet by virtue of the special publication fund so generously subscribed by the members of the club and others in response to Mr. Potter's appeal."

Another way of disseminating these doctrines is by offering prizes for essays by the students in the colleges of the world.

This shows to some extent the workings of this foreign organization which is trying to break down the commercial supremacy of other nations, and of the United States in particular. Perhaps if its members were only Englishmen we should not wonder that so much money and pains should be spent to get control of the markets of this country. But we find among its members a long list of Americans, and these we give herewith for the information of our readers, showing the full list as it existed in 1888, although there are several names of persons recently deceased. The list should be studied carefully, as we want our readers to know the names of these Americans (?) who are lending their support to a foreign organization to break down the industries of their own country:

Why I Am a Protectionist.

I believe, 1. That domestic employment and production are essential to national wealth and independence.

2. That the earning power of labor measures the purchasing and consuming power of a people and determines the volume of business, upon which all classes depend for prosperity.

3. That the highest wages for labor consistent with fair returns upon capital and fair prices for products promotes the greatest national prosperity, because a man earning three dollars a day has three times the wealth creating power of a man earning one dollar.

4. That unrestricted foreign competition would destroy our industrial independence, reduce the wages of labor, shrink the volume of internal trade, depleta our national wealth, enrich Europe and ruin me—hence I am a Protectionist. Hon. J. Hanson, of Georgia.

Is This Merely "Tariff Reform?"

It is a humiliating and disgraceful confession, a base slander, to say that the American people need any laws to protect them from competition with any other nation. Nothing has made England what she is but her Free-trade, her unfettered commerce. Compare our resources and advantages with hers, and imagine what our position would be among the nations if unhampered by the fetters of Protection.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

How long will intelligent voters continue to believe that there is no movement toward Free-trade in this country? That opposition to Protection is only a demand for a harmless tariff "reform?"

The western farmer's instinct is wiser than Mr. Gladstone's philosophy. The farmer knows that the larger the home market the better, are his prices, and that as the home market is narrowed his prices fall.—James G. Blaine.

Are All Republicans Thieves?

"All Republicans are thieves" is an idea original with Colonel A. K. McClure, who has started out with this proclamation in his effort to turn Pennsylvania Democratic and nominate Governor Pattison as a Democratic candidate for the presidency. He has written scores of editorials in its elucidation. The Democratic managers have stuffed a hundred newspapers with columns in its demonstration. The Democratic platform at Harrisburg affirms it in a dozen planks.

"All Republicans are thieves."

The campaign is to be one of calumny. Republicans, to escape suspicion, vote the Democratic ticket, and please Harrity, McClure & Co.

POLITICAL DRIFT.

The farmers of Pennsylvania are for Gregg and Morrison this trip.

Scratch a mugwump editor in Pennsylvania and you find a ring Democrat.

In order to suppress the Democratic campaign liar it may yet become necessary to erect turnstiles at the political meetings.

The New York Press proposes as a design for the Democratic campaign badge a barrel and a bung starter. That would be appropriate, even if it is not pretty.

Pennsylvania's campaign this year will go far toward determining results next year. The Republicans know this and are not to be befogged by transient issues.

Grangers of the Keystone state propose to stand by the Republican party. They are pleased with the action of the last legislature in distributing millions of dollars for the schools and thereby reducing local taxation.

Serious Danger!

Threatens every man, woman or child living in a region of country where fever and ague is prevalent, since the germs of malaria are inhaled from the air and are swallowed from the water of such a region. Medicinal safeguard is absolutely necessary to nullify this danger. As a means of fortifying and acclimating the system so as to be able to resist the malarial poison, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is incomparably the best and the most popular. Irregularities of the stomach, liver and bowels encourage malaria; but these are speedily rectified by the Bitters. The functions of digestion and secretion are assisted by its use, and a vigorous as well as regular condition of the system promoted by it. Constitution and physique which is also a certain and thorough remedy in worse cases of intermittent and remittent fever.

READY FOR BATTLE.

Soldiers Enlisting to Fight for Gregg and Morrison.

A VETERANS' STATE ORGANIZATION.

A Handsome Banner with Patriotic Coloring Unfurled at Headquarters in Philadelphia and Correspondence Opened with Grand Army Men in the Several Counties.

There is promise of a very patriotic coloring being given to the campaign in this state before November shall roll around. The nomination of two brave soldiers by the Republican state convention and a loyal declaration in the party platform, showing appreciation of the services of the veterans who defended the union, is in striking contrast with the attitude of the Democracy.

The Democrats ignored the soldier in their nominations, and shut them out of their platform as well.

That this will be resented on election day is beyond doubt.

The war veterans are organizing as they never did before in a political campaign. The call to arms was sounded in Philadelphia. The old soldiers have been responding nobly throughout the commonwealth. Organizations are being perfected in every county. Battalions of Gregg and Morrison supporters are being enlisted from the ranks of the veterans, who will know no politics in this campaign. Democrats are just as enthusiastic as Republicans.

A well known soldier, who has always been a Democrat, and an active one, too, in Philadelphia, remarked the other day that he was confident that thousands of Democratic soldiers intend to vote for General Gregg and Captain Morrison. He himself served with Gregg from the time his command was under General McClellan in the swamps of the Chickahominy until it was a part of Sheridan's command in front of and beyond Petersburg. It was his lot to be thrown in the presence of Gregg most of the time from that early June day in 1863 when, under the command of General Alfred Pleasonton the cavalry of the Army of the Potomac fought the battle of Brandy Station, in Virginia, where the rebel cavalry, under Jeb Stuart, met their first positive defeat of the war, and all through the series of cavalry battles that took place while the two armies were on the march to Gettysburg. He was with Gregg when he held the right flank of Meade's army at Gettysburg through three days of fighting, and where, on the last day, Gregg's division defended the cavalry of the south under Stuart, Wade Hampton and Fitz Hugh Lee in their desperate efforts to turn Meade's flank in order that they might get possession of the Baltimore and Gettysburg line of Meade's communications in his rear, so as to make the charge of Pickett against Hancock's lines in the center a matter of comparative ease.

"How can a man who followed such a leader during the four years of the war," said this Democratic soldier, "turn him aside and vote for a young and unknown corporation lawyer? How can the Lincoln Republicans who voted for Pattison simply as a protest against the means that made Delamater a candidate cast aside a man like Gregg, who fought so splendidly on an appointment from Lincoln for a mere Democratic politician picked out by Pattison and Harrity to further a scheme for their own personal aggrandizement? It isn't possible. I tell you that Gregg will poll the mass of the Democratic soldier vote.

"And now as to Captain Morrison," he continued. "I happen to know him personally. He served through the entire war in the famous Groundhead regiment." In all the engagements and siegen in which his regiment took part the little captain bore himself like a true soldier. You should hear the story of the part he took in the final capture of Petersburg. In that terrible charge upon the enemy's line, following the famous mine explosion, Captain Morrison was in the leading brigade and led his company into that harvest of death and destruction with heroism that was remarkable.

The War Veterans' campaign committee have opened headquarters in Philadelphia on Chestnut street below Thirteenth, and the above cut shows the banner they have unfurled to the breeze. This committee is in correspondence with veterans all over the state.

What Everybody Knows.

The Democratic plan of campaign in Pennsylvania is to steal a state victory upon local issues, and when they do this one of their leaders, Congressman Maish, all too frankly says they can easily carry the state in 1892. The battle of this year is intended to control that of next year. It scarcely needed a leading Democrat to tell the people this.

Last Day for Naturalization.

Attention is directed to the fact that next Saturday, Oct. 3, will be the last day for naturalization, for qualification for this fall's election, it being required that a person must be naturalized at least one month before he can vote.

What Democrats Dread.

The Democrats in Pennsylvania dread a hustling campaign, as they know it means a full vote, and that means a great Republican victory.

Miles' Nerve & Liver Pills.

An important discovery. They act on the liver, stomach and bowels through the nerves. A new principle. They speedily cure biliousness, bad taste, torpid liver, piles and constipation. Splendid liver, piles and constipation. Splendid for men, women and children. Smallest, mildest, surest. 30 doses for 25 cents. Samples free at A. B. Armstrong's drug store

To Our Subscribers.

The special announcement which appeared in our columns some time since, announcing a special arrangement with Dr. B. J. Kendall Co., of Enosburgh Falls, Vt., publishers of "A Treatise on the Horse and his Disease," whereby our subscribers were enabled to secure a copy of that valuable work free by sending their address to B. J. Kendall Co. (and enclosing a two-cent stamp for mailing cards) is renewed for a limited period. We trust all will avail themselves of the opportunity of obtaining this valuable work. To every lover of the horse it is indispensable, as it treats in a simple manner all the diseases which afflict this noble animal. Its phenomenal sale throughout the United States and Canada, make it standard authority. Mention this paper when sending for "Treatise."

—RHEUMATISM CURED IN A DAY.—"Mystic Cure" for Rheumatism and Neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75 cents. Sold by A. B. Armstrong Druggist, Smethport.

There are some patent medicines that are more marvelous than a dozen doctors' prescriptions, but they're not those that profess to cure everything.

Everybody, now and then, feels "run down," "played out." They've the will, but no power to generate vitality. They're not sick enough to call a doctor, but just too sick to be well. That's where the right kind of a patent medicine comes in, and does for a dollar what the doctor wouldn't do for less than five or ten.

We put in our claim for Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

We claim it to be an unequaled remedy to purify the blood and invigorate the liver. We claim it to be lasting in its effects, creating an appetite, purifying the blood, and preventing Bilious, Typhoid and Malarial fevers if taken in time. The time to take it is when you first feel the signs of weariness and weakness. The time to take it, on general principles, is NOW.
